'Outstanding Veterinary Service in the comfort of your own home!'

Dr Annie Round.

I decided to become a vet after first studying equine science and working with dressage horses in Germany. Graduating from the University of Queensland vet school in 2004, I started out in NSW in mixed practice; predominantly small animals and horses, some farm animals, and the occasional koala and dolphin. In 2006 I moved to Melbourne to focus on companion animals. For the best part of three years now, I have been working for Southern Vets Veterinary Clinics, based in Cheltenham and Dingley Village.

The aspects of my job that have always interested me most are the animals themselves, the people that love them, and the stories that come from the part of a lifetime spent together. Never is this relationship more heartbreakingly apparent than when the time comes to have a pet put to sleep.

I believe that this experience should be as private and non-clinical as possible, which is why I started the house call euthanasia service in addition to my general practice work. For the procedure itself, I use an extension line, thus enabling me to step back out of the way while this very personal moment passes between you and your pet.

I am flexible in terms of locations times, and any special requests you may have. Trust me - they will not sound silly; I think proper goodbyes are highly important!
